

Hartpury College

Hartpury College is a further education college and associate faculty of the University of the West of England situated in the village of Hartpury, Gloucestershire. Providing courses on equine care, animal science, agricultural and land management courses, sports science, food technology and related courses, they place great emphasis on the quality of teaching and have invested in innovative and modern equipment, facilities, and buildings, earning them an Ofsted 'Outstanding' grade.

As part of their commitment to excellence they have used PPD for the last 5 years to provide First Aid training for students, in large numbers, and staff. PPD have also provided the college with AED (Automated External Defibrillation) Training and Health & Safety training over the same period.

Nikki Perry, Short Course Manager at Hartpury College says: "PPD were a named training provider for the college over 5 years ago when I first started as Short Course Manager."

"PPD have developed a strong working relationship with Hartpury College and tailor their delivery to suit a wide range of audiences, from 6-18 year olds, professional clients and Mums in school returning to learning. They have a real flair of pacing delivery to suit individual needs and pitching the delivery to maximise the impact of knowledge."

"Our 16-18 year olds have provided positive feedback on all courses and PPD have linked the first aid delivery with some important messages on road safety. The pass rate for the courses have been extremely high which clearly illustrates the success of their delivery techniques and gives staff and students alike great confidence in their abilities."

"PPD have offered a wealth of knowledge on all aspects of First Aid and Health & Safety, giving advice on other courses we could offer. Their training services are excellent value for money. I would highly recommend PPD's services."
