

Wildfowl & Wetlands Trust, Slimbridge

WWT engages and inspires people, governments and businesses to take direct action to save wetlands and their wildlife and provides the tools that enable them to do so. Their wetland centres have welcomed over twenty million people over the years, introducing children and adults alike to the wonders of wetland wildlife from all over the world and the habitats they live in.

A visit to WWT Slimbridge is a completely unique experience from one month to the next. In the summer months breeding birds are in full swing and the first waders are returning from the Arctic. In the cold winter months the reserve is a hive of activity for migrants such as Bewick's swans and you stand a good chance of catching a glimpse of a short-eared or barn owl. WWT Slimbridge Wetland Centre is open 7 days a week, 364 days a year, only closing to the public on 25 December, because there is always something to see and do.

For over 3 years PPD have provided First Aid and Health & Safety Training for Centre Managers and Health & Safety Reps, plus advice & guidance to WWT's overall Health & Safety Manager, following their first call from WWT Slimbridge's Training Department.

"PPD tailor their courses to our requirements and the training they offer is really excellent, by far the best Health & Safety Trainers we have used," says Terry Read.

"Our staff react very well to the training as Dave is able to involve everyone and gets messages across well. I think it is highly likely that staff feel more confident about health and safety issues thanks to the quality of PPD's training."

PPD have also helped the Slimbridge centre to identify other training needs, for example First Aid training. "I would be more than happy to recommend PPD's great value training services" says Terry.
